Just my daily checkin with you guys. Sorry if you're getting sick of me, but just trying to include the detailed statement that I was told we would get early this week, and that I wrote into earlier story that was coming.

Thx

Okay.

For now, all I have to share is the statement we used last night. Please attribute to an agency spokeswoman:

While the EPA Inspector General(IG) received the letter from CO DNR Executive Director King on September 2, 2015, because the IG is an independent entity within EPA, others at the agency did not receive the letter until November 10, 2015. It was shared with the media at that time in response to a CO open records law request, and subsequently shared by CO

DNR with others at EPA.

We continue to have a productive working relationship with the state of Colorado and will review the matters outlined in their letter.

That said, Nancy Grantham and I want to give you a call, since we're guessing you'll want to do another story on this.

Are you available in a little bit? If so, what number?

Understood – we're working at very high levels to get you something stronger than what we sent around last night to those who requested it. (which was essentially, we just saw the letter and will take a look.)

Hey Christie and others,

So, I think it's unfair to have this AP story floating around about Mike King, dir. Natural Resources Colorado, contradicting investigations that stated that Colorado officials were backing the plan to run piping through the entrance of Gold King, without having comment from you guys.

Beyond the contradiction, I think the public is raising no-confidence in the investigations. If the state says it didn't back the plan, nor oppose it, and the state also says that it made no determination as to the water level, then why has the EPA been saying that state engineers were involved with supporting the plan and being involved with it?

It seems odd that the state would send this letter unless it truly wasn't involved in the plan or the work. So, looking for comment from you guys. Were the investigations erroneous? Do you need to start from scratch now? How can the public take these investigations seriously?

Please get back to me today.

Thx
